

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Lora Tucker

Lora L. Tucker is a retired Army Colonel and former CEO and is currently a student at Georgetown University, having been selected to attend the Leadership Coaching Program at Georgetown University's Institute for Transformational Leadership. Her passion, simply stated, is leadership.

Lora has a multidimensional repertoire of leadership talent. She has demonstrated adaptability in varied leadership roles throughout her career to move organizations forward, build high performing teams, and develop tomorrow's leaders.

Lora is a proven leader of large complex organizations with over 30 years of professional experience that includes change leadership, strategic learning, public affairs, strategic and crises communications, and culture change. She has deployed and led units all over the world including Korea, Germany, Italy, Hawaii, Southwest Asia, and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba providing a rich cultural leadership competence. Lora is a 360-degree thinker, with the capability to holistically understand organizational challenges and solutions.

Lora is currently moving through a space of professional transition. Her intellectual curiosity is enabling an inner "deep dive" as she discovers what is next on her leadership journey.

Lora holds a BA in Social Science from Boston College, a MS in Administration from Central Michigan University, and a MS in Strategic Studies from the Army War College. Her Service awards include the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star Medal, and the Defense Meritorious Service Medal.

Lora is a Dive Master, enjoying and appreciating the unique world under the ocean. She loves sports, traveling, and the outdoors. She knows without a doubt that she is who she is today due to the love and support of her incredible family and friends, for whom she is eternally grateful.